

planned actions

that expand ceaselessly that are fierce that are unutterable that have to exist with other fads that only exist as a knot that are inflated that are never even that lose their contour that forecast scenarios that never let it out that only appear on slow nights that never explain that steal the shadow of other actions that swell that never wake up that confront other actions that build side-splitting stages that form pictures on tabloids that are just too curly that are allergic to anything around them that are on the edge eight days of the week that multiply themselves exponentially and become oblivious that are stolen that hide from other actions that fake their suicide that cause leaks that are prone to combustion that never comprehend their immediate surrounding that rotate relentlessly and then faint that are overwhelmed by their appearance that are always in the middle of a picture that want to share one's life that have no ingredients that can exist without space that are always upset that go into wrong directions that never curve that have no real reason that miss inaugural slots that never know how to come back that cannot be eaten that play games that are confused with proportions that never like the flavor of anything that will last forever and a day and eventually collapse that never remember what happened before that watch things go bad that cannot exist without color that always have a moment left that only exist for tomorrow that have never seen a fine day that cannot tell more that have unknown appearances that won't tell the hard truth that evaporate that produce generous illusions rey akdogan